Opening Ceremonies of the World's Fair.

HUEN WY TENISON.

The latest advices from England contain the secre
mance at the opening of the International Exhibition on the 1st of May. The Queen being unable to be present, appointed the following persons to represent her on the occasion:—The Duke of Cambridge, Archbishop of Canterbury, Earl of Derby, Lord Palmerston, and the Speaker of the House of Commons.
The arrival of these distinguished personages was announced by a flourish of trumpets, and followed by a procession composed of high military and civil officers, and detachments from the army and navy.
When the company arrived at the western dome the national anthem was sung, after which Earl Granville, chairman of the committee, and Mr. Gladstone, deputy-chairman, and the Duke of Cambridge presented on behalf of the Queen's commissioners for opening the exhibition. The procession then moved down to the eastern dome, where the special musical performances took place—the orchestra consisting of 2,000 vocalists and 400 musicians. The music, composed for the occasion, consisted of a grand overture
by Meyerbeer, a grand march by Auber, and a chororale by Dr. Sterndale Bennett to the following words by Alfred Tennyson, poet laureate:

Uplift a thousand voices full and exultant.

In this wide hall with earth's incantations stored,

At last we find our strength, our might, our food,

Whose voice more in peace the nations meet,

Where Science, Art, and Labor have surpassed

The myriad forms of plenty at our feet.

O silent father of our kings to be,

Mourning in the golden hour of justice,

For this, for all, we keep our thanks to thee!

The world-compelling plan was thine,

And to the long laborious miles

Of Palace to the gaunt abodes,

Rich in model and design;

Harvest-tost and husbandry,

Loam and wheel and engine,

Secrets of the sultry sun,

Steel and gold, and corn and wine

Fable rough, or fairy fine,

Sunny slopes of the Lime,

Polar marble, and a feast

Of wonder, out of West and East,

And shapes and hues of Part divine

All of beauty, all of grace,

That one fair planet can produce,

Brought from under every star,

Blown from every man,

And mixt, as life is mixt with pain.

The works we see, the signs of war,

O ye, the wise who think, the wise who reign,

For us, the world's sorrows bear their latest chain,

And here the fair unshackled peasant fly

To thy gay heavens under all the sky,

And mix the seasons and the golden hours,

Till each man finds his own in all men's good,

And all men work in nobly brotherhood,

Breaking their mailed foats and armed towers,

And gathering all the fruits of peace and crowned with all her flowers.

VARIETY.

You seem to walk more erect than usual, my dear sir.—"Yes I have been straitened by circumstances."

MAKING THE THING EVEN.—We can get Southern meat if we can't get their cotton.

Why should potatoes grow better than other vegetables? Because they have eyes to see what they are doing.

A young fellow, fond of talking, remarked "I am no prophet." "True," replied a lady present, "no prophet to yourself or to any one else."

A wag tells us of a ladybird who made her tea so weak that it couldn't get up the spout of the tea-pot.

About the only person we ever heard of that was not spoiled by being banished, was a Jew named Daniel.

Matrimonial history is a narrative of many woes, but the story of love may be told in a few letters.

He who thinks too much of himself, will be in danger of being forgotten by the rest of the world.

A crusty old bachelor says he thinks it is woman and not her wrongs that ought to be re-dressed.

Knowledge can be acquired without pains and application. It is troublesome, and like deep digging for pure water; but when once you come to the springs they rise up and meet you.

The pleasantest things in the world are pleasant thoughts, and the greatest art in life is to have as many of them as possible.

No woman can be a lady who will wound or mortify another. No matter how beautiful, how cultivated she may be, she is in reality coarse, and the innate vulgarity of her nature manifests itself here. Uniformly kind, courteous and polite treatment, is one mark of a true woman.

Story of the Farm.—A story is told of the great French satirist, which finely illustrates his knowledge of human nature. He was traveling in Germany, in entire ignorance of language and currency. Having obtained some small change for some of his French coins, he used to pay the coachmen and others in the following manner.—Taking a handful of the numismatic specimens from his pocket, he counted them one by one, into the hand of the receiver's hand. As soon as he received the least twinkle of a smile, he took back the last coin from the hand and returned it, with the remainder to his pocket. He afterwards found that, in pursuing this method, he had not paid for anything.

George Carries.—If a man asks you to be his son, say "No." And rarer otherwise you may be enslaved for life, or your wife and children may spend a weary existence in want, sickness and beggary.

If you find yourself in possession of a counterfeit note or coin, throw it into the fire on the instant; otherwise you may be tempted to pass it, and may pass it, to feel more therefore as though you lived; then it may pass into some man's hands as mean as yourself, with a new perpetration of iniquity, the loss to fall eventually on some poor struggling widow, who has not a cent to live on.

Never laugh at the mishaps of any fellow mortal.

The very instant you receive yourself in a passion, shut your mouth; this is one among the best precepts outside of inspiration.

The man who expects the last cent is always a mean man; there is no "exponent" in all the "Metternich" efficient enough to "purge" him of his delusion; he is beyond druggery.

Never affect to be "plain" or "tame"; these are the synonyms of beauty and beautyishness. Such persons are constantly inflicting wounds which neither time nor money can ever heal.

Never be with a man's expect true generosity; never dwell in such a heart; it only wants the opportunity to become a cheat or a rogue.—Hail's Journal of Health.
